"Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder..."- Almost everybody nods in approval in this saying because in truth, beauty comes in whole package and that is, the totality of the person. Like other personal enhancement principles and theories, beauty is a matter of personal affirmation and choice. What you think about yourself will certainly show in your action and physical appearance. The very basic principle to show the beauty within you is through acceptance and love. If you affirm the beauty in you, then it will naturally flow on the way how you interact with the people in your circle. The good news...

Its good thing that there are other ways to reveal your true beauty without the fear of surgical instruments; there are beauty enhancers in the market that proves to be effective. For those who want to have sparkling eyes, work on your lashes and make it appear darker and fuller. Use the latest beauty innovation called Latisse ® (bimatoprost ophthalmic solution) 0.03%.

With the increasing demands of the product, it is widely encompassing that companies produced an equivalent replica of the product offered at a lower cost but with the same efficacy.

Generic form of Latisse (Generic Latisse) is now available in circulation under the following product names:

- Bimat – manufactured by Ajanta Pharma
- Careprost – manufactured by Sunpharma

Latisse is only available upon prescription, but with regards to its generic brand above mentioned, it can be available online without prescription. Generic Latisse is sold at low price compared to the branded name Latisse.

Pharmacological Action

Generic Latisse has the same formulation like what it contained in its branded name. It contains 0.03 % bimatoprost ophthalmic solution that works in extending the anaphase stage of eyelash growth.

Bimatoprost belongs to the class of prostaglandin medicine. These medical products affect the hair follicles and believed to improve the hair growth as well as its color making it longer and darker.

For several years, Bimatoprost has been used for the treatment of glaucoma, but it has showed significant success in enhancing the growth of eyelashes to make it appear fuller and longer.

Generic Latisse also works the same way as its branded counterpart and is available in 3ml bottle.

Indication

Generic Latisse is indicated for the treatment of the following conditions:

- Glaucoma
- Hypotrichosis

Eye pressure that usually happens when a person is suffering from Glaucoma is decreased with the use of this medication.

Latisse generic is a top rated medication in the treatment of Hypotrichosis by improving the thickness and growth of eyelashes. Its effect is usually observed at least 12 weeks after regular use.

Generic Latisse

Mode of Administration

The medication represents a topical solution that is administered in different way depending on the specific condition it is used for treatment.

For the treatment of Glaucoma. Generic Latisse is to be applied directly in the affected eye at one drop, once a day using an applicator that is contained in the packaging. It is to be noted that change of eye color is one of the side effect of this medicine. Application of the medicine to both eyes is recommended to have a balanced color of both eyes.

For the treatment of Hypotrichosis. Latisse generic is to be applied directly on the base of your upper eyelashes using the applicator. Care should be observed in the application of the medicine to avoid growth of hair outside the treatment area.

Wash hands properly before and after each application. Always dispose the applicator after every use.

Generic Latisse is a once a day treatment preferably applied during bedtime. Do not increase treatment to avoid overdose and increase the occurrence of harsh side effects.

Contraindications and Cautions

The medication is contraindicated to patients who have allergic reactions to bimatoprost or any of its components. Consult your doctor regarding your compatibility of the medication. Seek medical advice if you have the following conditions:

- Macular edema
